Terry Flanagan is a career arborist with more than 30 years in the industry. He began his career in the Boston, Massachusetts area, but also worked in Colorado before settling into Oregon for the bulk of his career.

Terry has served ISA in several capacities. He has been a member of the Board of Directors since 2000, and has served as a member of the Certification Board of Directors since 2005. He is chair of Tree Risk Qualification Panel of Experts, and in 2012 he will serve as the chair of the 2012 Portland ISA International Conference.

As a consultant for Teragan & Associates, Inc. since 2000, Terry provides arboricultural information to guide the development and management of trees, shrubs and other horticultural plants on commercial, municipal and residential property. Terry has also worked for several other tree care firms, including General Tree Service, Inc., where he served primarily as the manager of the tree division but also served as manager of both the landscape maintenance and construction division and business development managers.

In addition to his work with Teragan & Associates, Inc., Terry also served as an instructor of horticulture at Clackamas Community College for 10 years. While there, he taught courses in arboriculture, pruning, tree climbing, landscape installation and chainsaw use and maintenance.

As a member of the Pacific Northwest Chapter, Terry is currently serving as the regional educational coordinator, where he is responsible for organizing the regional educational seminar for arborist professional development in the greater Portland and Southwest region and Washington. Terry has served on the boards for both the Pacific Northwest Chapter and the Rocky Mountain Chapter in various positions for many years. He is also an active member of the American Society of Consulting Arborists.

Terry holds a bachelor of science degree in natural resource management from Colorado State University. He strives to continue his professional development through participation in several annual conferences, including the American Society of Consulting Arborists, the Annual ISA Conference and Trade Show, the Oregon Community Trees Annual Summit, the Regional Training Conference of the Pacific Northwest Chapter of the International Society of Arboriculture, and the Oregon Golf Course Superintendents Association Winter Seminar .
